Context

Biographical Note

Born in Boitsfort, Belgium 1883, died 1969; born in a well-to-do Walloon Belgian family; in 1905 he became acquainted with the anarchist commune of Emile Chapelier, which was located in Stockel-Bois from 3 April of that same year and later transferred to Boitsfort, both near Brussels; the commune, named 'L'Expérience' (the Experiment) and with the parole 'Nous n'avons ni dieu ni maître' (We have neither God nor master), was dedicated to the principles of common property, free love, vegetarianism, anti-militarism and anti-colonialism; those who joined later included Dutch deserters; in February 1908 the colony fell apart as a result of internal tensions and external opposition; Marin fled to England and joined the anarchist-Tolstoyan Whiteway Colony near Gloucestershire; he lived there until his death.
